R1: My First Few Weeks of USER DESIGN

The first few weeks of user design is much more tolerable compared to the other subject, might be the teacher of the teaching style. I honestly learned a lot in User Design with the knowledge as something I know I will used in the future and also understand very well. Trello was surprisingly new and duplication of submission of files is certainly weird, since I mostly expected APC to focus on Microsoft applications.

I am confident to say that this class is more collaborative due to more interaction and kahoot quiz unlike the other classes allowing much more healthy teaching environment. Learning curve was still steep though just like other programming subject, specially to those students without prior programming background. It seems manageable with some help with classmates with more experience but requires more time if done individually. The User Design class right now is tolerable to an extent but asked of my honest opinion with the online class, I would still suggest an education freeze.
